

STYLE.COM

click to begin previous | next

art basel UPDATE

TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD BE IN MIAMI BEACH THIS WEEK

If New York (...and Los Angeles...and London...and Paris) seem conspicuously empty this week, that's because large swaths of the cities' art, fashion, and tech—yes, tech (keep reading)—communities have descended on Miami Beach for the annual Art Basel fair. Style.com has a sneak preview of all the festivities, from the Design District pop-up shops to the Collins Avenue hotel shindigs. Check back regularly for our daily party reports.

—Darrell Hartman

click to begin >

previous | next

email | Like 168 43 retweet + more

back to intro

previous | next

GOING DUTCH

NOT THAT CECCONI'S HAS GONE TOTALLY STALE OR ANYTHING, BUT THE DUTCH IS THIS YEAR'S HOT NEW RESTAURANT. HAVING OPENED AT THE W SOUTH BEACH IN MID-NOVEMBER, THE COLLINS AVENUE

OUTPOST OF ANDREW CARMELLINI'S HIT NEW YORK EATERY HAS ALREADY HOOKED A BIG FISH: BLUE-CHIP COLLECTOR ABY ROSEN, WHO'S HOSTING HIS ANNUAL BASEL DINNER THERE. (AS OWNER OF LEVER HOUSE, HE ALSO KNOWS A THING OR TWO ABOUT RESTAURANTS.) LAST YEAR, EVERYONE FROM A-ROD TO PRINCESS FIRYAL OF JORDAN DROPPED BY ROSEN'S DINNER BASH. WEDNESDAY NIGHT, NEW YORK'S ACQUAVELLA GALLERIES HAS BOOKED THE TERRACE; OTHERWISE, THE PUBLIC IS THEORETICALLY ALLOWED TO TRY THE DUTCH'S FRESH OYSTERS, SPICE-GLAZED PORK CHOP, AND BLUE CRAB PIZZA.

Photo: Courtesy of The Dutch

previous | next

email | Like 168 43 retweet + more